Work Health and Safety legislation requires a Persons Conducting a Business or Undertaking (PCBU) to take all reasonably practicable steps to ensure the safety and well-being of its workers. Similarly, the legislation requires workers to take reasonable care of themselves and others in the workplace. This shared responsibility in achieving safe workplaces is partially achieved by providing workers with information, instruction and training.

Whilst it is true to say all workers have WHS responsibilities in a workplace it is equally correct to say that Managers & Supervisors hold an additional level of responsibilities when it comes to health & safety.

Given these additional responsibilities it is important for managers and supervisors to have a higher level of understanding in relation to health and safety legislation, hazard identification, risk assessments, SWMS and effective methods for consultation.

By increasing the health and safety knowledge of our managers and supervisors we decrease the likelihood of incidents occurring in the workplace. Safer work places are more productive and generally better places to work with increased moral.

Skilled and knowledgeable managers and supervisors are seen as fundamental to achieving safe work places.

The aim of the session is to provide managers and supervisors with increased knowledge strategies to effectively manage health and safety.
